History of Dolls Houses

Dolls houses have a rich history that dates back to the 16th century. Initially, they were created as status symbols for wealthy families and were not intended for children. Here's a brief overview of their evolution:

- 16th Century: The earliest dolls houses were elaborate wooden structures, often crafted as a display of wealth.
- 17th Century: These homes became more intricate, featuring detailed furnishings and elements that mirrored the owner's real home.
- 19th Century: The introduction of mass production made dolls houses accessible to a broader audience, turning them into popular children's toys.
- 20th Century: Dolls houses evolved into artistic expressions, with collectors focusing on creating historically accurate representations.

Today, 1:12 scale dolls houses are enjoyed by both children and adults, serving as a medium for creativity, storytelling, and design.
