Understanding International Trade

International trade refers to the exchange of goods and services across international borders. It is influenced by a variety of factors, including economic policies, cultural differences, and technological advancements.

Theories of International Trade

Several theories explain why countries engage in international trade:

1. Absolute Advantage: Proposed by Adam Smith, this theory suggests that a country should produce goods where it has an absolute efficiency advantage over others.
2. Comparative Advantage: David Ricardo's theory posits that countries should specialize in producing goods they can create at a lower opportunity cost, promoting trade even if one country is less efficient overall.
3. Heckscher-Ohlin Model: This model emphasizes that countries will export goods that utilize their abundant resources and import goods that require scarce resources.
4. New Trade Theory: This theory introduces economies of scale and network effects as critical factors in international trade, suggesting that certain industries will become concentrated in specific countries.
