"An Idiot Abroad" was conceived as a travel documentary series with a twist, created by Ricky Gervais and Stephen Merchant. It first aired in 2010 and showcased a different approach to travel programming by sending Karl Pilkington on a journey around the world. The idea originated from the comedic dynamic between Gervais, Merchant, and Pilkington, with the latter's natural skepticism and straightforward attitude providing a unique lens on global cultures and experiences. The show was produced by Ricky Gervais Productions and Sky1, quickly gaining a cult following due to its refreshing format.

Origins of the Concept
