Background: The Anointing of David

The story of David begins in the book of 1 Samuel, amidst a turbulent time for the nation of Israel. The Israelites had demanded a king to lead them, and God had allowed this request. Saul was chosen as the first king, but his reign was marked by disobedience to God. Consequently, God sought a new leader, prompting the prophet Samuel to anoint a successor.

The Selection of David

1. Samuel's Mission: God instructed Samuel to go to Bethlehem and anoint one of the sons of Jesse as the new king. Despite his hesitations, Samuel obeyed the Lord.
2. The Sons of Jesse: Upon arriving in Bethlehem, Samuel was introduced to Jesse's sons. He saw Eliab, the eldest, and thought he must be the chosen one due to his impressive stature. However, God reminded Samuel that He looks at the heart, not outward appearances.
3. The Anointing: After going through all of Jesse's sons, Samuel inquired if there were any others. Jesse mentioned David, the youngest, who was tending sheep. When David arrived, Samuel anointed him with oil, signifying God's selection and the empowerment of the Holy Spirit for his future role as king.

- Volunteering to Fight: When David expressed his willingness to confront Goliath, King Saul was initially skeptical due to David's youth and inexperience. However, David recounted his victories over lions and bears, attributing his success to God's protection.
- Saul's Armor: Saul offered David his armor, but David found it cumbersome. Instead, he chose to face Goliath with only his sling and five smooth stones from a brook.

The Confrontation
