What Are Countable Nouns?

Countable nouns refer to items that can be counted as individual units. They have both singular and plural forms, allowing for the use of numbers and quantifiers that indicate quantity. For example:

- Singular: apple, car, book
- Plural: apples, cars, books

Countable nouns can be used with numbers, and they can be preceded by the articles "a" or "an" in the singular form. Here are some key characteristics:

1. Quantifiable: You can say "two apples," "three cars," etc.
2. Plural Form: Countable nouns can be made plural by adding -s or -es.

individual elements. For example:

- Substances: water, sugar, rice
- Abstract Concepts: happiness, information, advice

Key characteristics of uncountable nouns include:

1. Non-quantifiable: You cannot say "two waters" or "three sugars."
