The scope of these techniques covers emotional regulation, conflict resolution, trauma processing, and strengthening familial bonds through shared creative expression.

Theoretical Foundations

These techniques draw from various psychological theories such as attachment theory, family systems theory, and Jungian archetypes. Play-Based Techniques in Family Therapy

Play provides a natural and accessible medium for family members to express themselves, experiment with roles, and resolve interpersonal conflicts. These techniques are designed to be engaging and non-threatening, encouraging participation from even the most reluctant family members.

Role-Playing and Puppetry
