The Commercial Driver's License (CDL) is not just a standard driver's license; it comes with various classifications and endorsements based on the type of vehicle and cargo the driver plans to operate. Types of Commercial Driver's Licenses

There are three main classes of CDL:

1. Class A: Required to operate combination vehicles with a gross vehicle weight rating (GVWR) of 26,001 pounds or more, including trailers over 10,000 pounds.
2. Class B: Required for operating a single vehicle with a GVWR of 26,001 pounds or more, or any vehicle towing a trailer that does not exceed 10,000 pounds.
3. Class C: Required for operating vehicles designed to transport 16 or more passengers (including the driver) or hazardous materials.

Each class has specific requirements and endorsements that drivers must understand and comply with, making preparation for the examination crucial.
